The death of a child was, in his opinion, something inconceivable. Sophie Freud was the fifth child of Sigmund Freud and Sophie Halberstadt. She was born on April 12th, 1893, and almost immediately became her father's favorite. That child, almost without knowing why, softened the tyrannical and patriarchal character of the father of psychoanalysis. She was beautiful, resolute, and always determined to follow her own will beyond what her surroundings may have dictated to her.
